... THE BODIES WERE PLENTY
... WITH NO PLACE TO HIDE ...
... SO WE BUILT A CRYPT ...
... AND HID THEM INSIDE

Ok so its fall winter is coming and I have a green house that needs to be taken down for the winter whats a guy to do

Well personally I like to invite a friend over to help me load a bunch of cardboard boxes from the local electronics store into my car and wrap them around the frame of the greenhouse

It takes a while and a little bit of cutting

It takes a bit of duck tape a must for sticking cardboard together

With the walls up it still dosent look good enough

So you cut up another couple boxes and there ya go a roof The view that you are looking at is where people will exit from the crypt and it is not in its final location

Next we disassembled the crypt into two pieces and brought them inside for the paint treatment. The paint was miss matches that was picked up at a local paint store cheap. The dark color is rolled on and will actually become the stones

The next step was to paint the grout for the stones on the painted surface oh where is Martha Stewart when you need her.

Ok we really need Martha now.... or do we? A lighter color was stippled onto the background that has become the stones.

Well the original design was for a stone finish all over but we changed the design halfway through and opted for a more concrete finish on the front and stone on the sides and back.
