Potion Cabinet and Labels

Posted by Johnny | Posted in Projects, The Manor | Posted on 20-09-2008

I decided this year that one of my projects for 2008 would be a new “yet old looking” potion cabinet to place in the kitchen. Last year, I found a vintage hutch witch was painted black and then aged. It definitely was a conversation piece however I feel that it limited what could be done, and was a bit large for the area. So, I decided to build my own and will post pictures shortly!

In order to get some inspiration for this project, I decided to start designing some labels for various bottles that would be displayed on the shelves that would be built into the cabinet. A friend sent me some great Photoshop brushes from Deviant Art to help give them that great look. Here are a few (below) that I feel are some of the best I came up with.

See attached word document for larger pictures to print or resize.

Eyeballs  Date: October 15, 2007
 (Contents) From: Edward's Optical Eye Care

Uses:
 Various potions, great flavor in drinks, top for cats, snacks, crafts and decoration.

Notes:
 They shiver and glow if left in the sun, or in water and seem to help, especially. The cat's love them.

Edible: Yes

Human Flesh  Date: October 31, 2007
 (Contents) From: Cain's Butcher Shop

Uses:
 Various potions, perfect as a snack with a cup of dead rose petal tea or diluted vampire blood. Can be used as a base to collect maggot.

Notes:
 Appears a lot of bugs, I see sealed. G-worms seem to enjoy feeding with's. Great baked in biscuits and goulash.

 NOT good!

Edible: Of Course!

CAUTION: POISON
ETHYLENE GLYCOL
